

Our mission

To facilitate connections and intercultural dialogue among Communication scholars throughout the discipline, by encouraging international collaborative research, serving as a source for grants, and serving as a clearing-house for information.

CCA

CID operates under the auspices of the Council of Communication Associations, an umbrella organization for 7 national and international communication associations based in the USA.

What we do

Professional opportunities

CID frequently shares publication opportunities, collaborative research opportunities, and job ads, as well as fellowships, postdocs, and PHD studentships.

Researcher profiles

CID maintains a growing collection of profiles of researchers with interests in intercultural dialogue and related matters.

Databases

The CID website offers several databases, including lists of centers and organizations sharing common goals around the world, information about teaching and studying abroad, and a bibliography of resources on intercultural dialogue and related topics.

Grants

When funding is available, CID distributes small travel grants to facilitate international collaboration. CID also publishes a list of grants offered by other organizations.

Conferences and other events

CID occasionally co-sponsors conferences and often shares information about conferences and other activities organized by others.

Publications

Key Concepts in Intercultural Dialogue provide short, accessible, easy-to-understand introductions to important concepts. These are currently being translated into several dozen languages as a way to expand the conversation.

Constructing Intercultural Dialogues present case studies telling the story of times when intercultural dialogue occurred, whether brief and casual or lengthy and highly structured, successful or unsuccessful.

CID Posters present quotes and concepts related to intercultural dialogue topics as images.

In Dialogue: CID Occasional Papers provide a forum for longer discussions of topics related to intercultural dialogue.

All of these publications are available for free on the CID website.
